SECOND DEGREE MURDER FOR C. W. LATIMER

When the jury in the C. W. Latimer murder trial reported a verdict Wednesday evening of second degree murder, the defendant, C. W. Latimer, was sentenced to the penitentiary for a term of years. A large crowd of sympathizers was non-plussed and the attorneys for the defense all but paralyzed.

Latimer was on trial for shooting Mackrodt on the street in Xenia Nov. 26, following an argument and quarrel that had broken out when the two men met. At different times previous to this date they had had duels of a wordy nature and the end came when Latimer shot his former friend four times in the back, killing him instantly.

It was evident that defendant and counsel were confident of acquittal and not more than manslaughter at the worst. But juries oftentimes have a way of determining a man's fate just the opposite of what might be predicted in advance.

Latimer made no defense other than for self protection as he believed Mackrodt would get him having been threatened. He showed no remorse and counsel stated that he was not sorry at what had been done which is thought to have weighed heavily against the defendant with the jury of five women and seven men.

The whole trouble has its foundation through demolition of Mackrodt as head of Pennsylvania railroad detectives and Latimer was accused of being responsible for it. Friction in the Klan factions in the county also figured in the case and evidence was produced that Mackrodt had threatened to shoot Dr. R. L. Hains and Rev. Middleton, officers of the Klan. Latimer, although a sworn officer exposed the dead man as being responsible for burning an automobile to get the insurance. Also that Mackrodt knew where stolen goods were taken from the Hutchison & Gibney store. Latimer claimed that Mackrodt would have killed him had he exposed Mackrodt.

Following the shooting Latimer walked across the street and gave him self up to Sheriff Shoop. While Prosecutor Williamson was getting a statement and gathering evidence he had the assistance of Judge Shoop. At that time it is said that Latimer became angered at the Judge and threatened him.

Following the indictment for first degree murder and setting of the trial for December 26, Prosecutor J. Kenneth Williamson resigned for reasons best known to himself that are said to have had a bearing on this case. The court then appointed Attorney Harry Armstrong and Dawson Smith as special counsel. The state was ably represented as Mr. Armstrong, well versed in criminal law, was able to meet Frank L. Johnson, probably the best jury lawyer in the county in criminal cases.

The jury was out three hours and seven ballots were taken. On the first ballot for first degree murder the vote was four and eight divided with one for acquittal. For second degree the vote was nine favorable, one for acquittal, one manslaughter and one first degree. On the seventh and final ballot the vote was unanimous for second degree murder which carries a life sentence.

The following composed the jury: Frank McClellan, Sugarcreek twp.; foreman; Hazel Flagg, Mary E. Ray, Jessella Lackey, Xenia. Ray Reed, Ross twp.; May Harper, Jamestown; George Warner, Bath twp.; Margaret Lindsey, Xenia; Joseph Shade, Bath; C. W. Squires, Sugarcreek twp.; H. E. Thomas, Caesar Creek twp.; Earl McClellan, Xenia township.

Latimer was a former big league base ball player and has resided in Xenia for ten years. His home was formerly in Loveland.

It is said that the jury being divided was lead in prayer by one of the women members previous to the last ballot with the result of a unanimous vote for second degree murder.

Counsel for Latimer announces that a motion for a new trial will be filed at once. If this is denied Latimer will no doubt be taken to the pen to start his sentence while the question is thrashed out in the upper courts for another trial.

The unfortunate part of the whole situation is that two wives with children are left without means of support that is rightfully theirs.

PAY LAST BOND FOUR LOOSE LIVES WHEN TRAIN HITS AUTO

Council met Tuesday evening to wind up the business for the year. One of the most important acts was authorizing the clerk to pay the last bond that is held against the village, that of $1,300 for the motor fire engine purchased several years ago. The bond was issued following a vote of the electors authorizing same. While other bonds are out for street improvement, yet this was but a method of financing the cost for the property holders. So far as we know Cedarville is the only town in the county that can say it is out of debt. Council has endeavored to operate the business of the village within its income—and the tax payers cannot be critical or sorry that this plan has been followed. The fire engine debt was a necessity at the time and by securing the motor pumper the village has profited by eliminating expensive overhead in upkeep for the steamer. The village has reason to be proud of its financial standing at the beginning of the new year.

NEW CHARGES FILED AGAINST D. E. CROW

Twenty-eight charges under four general heads were filed by the County commissioners against D. E. Crow, superintendent of the County Infirmary, before the State Civil Service Commission, Monday. He is charged with incompetency, inefficiency, dishonesty and neglect of duty.

The action followed passage of a resolution by the commissioners to enforce an order of removal of Crow on December 27, and to become effective January 2 at 2 o'clock.

In passing this resolution the commissioners rescinded and repealed all previous actions taken by that body in its efforts to oust Crow, who has been under fire for two months or more. His salary had been reduced to $25 a month and finally to $1 month to force retirement, but he held on, hoping to be reinstated by the new board that soon takes its seat. In addition a resolution was passed discharging Crow and naming M. S. Smith, temporary head, but an injunction secured by Crow stopped this action. The County Board of Visitors in a 100 page report have all sorts of things to say about Crow's management and treatment of the inmates. It was under these charges that the commissioners acted.

Crow is charged with failure to provide proper food. Giving inmates spoiled food. Rough treatment of inmates and not considering the sick. Poor management of farm, gardens, failure to keep poultry and egg supply, failure to can sufficient fruit and vegetables for winter use.

He is charged with dishonesty in that chieftain food checks have been appropriated for use of relatives. Giving away of foods and permitting relatives to haul food from the farm. Charged with lavish entertainment of relatives on Sunday in large numbers at expense of county. Failure to account for 27 head of hogs killed last spring on farm and not fed to the inmates.

Neglect of duty in not protecting county property from theft. Discouraging visitors who want to help inmates.

The charges were signed by all of the commissioners, John A. North, Herman Harvey and G. H. Perrell.

W. L. Miller, counsel for Mr. Crow has led an answer and denies all of the charges. Attorney Harry D. Smith represents the commissioners. The State Civil Service Commission has set January 13 for the hearing in Xenia.

The State Civil Service Commission has suspended Crow for 30 days pending the hearing of the charges.
